New Podcast - NYC Shakers Lam Group and MindClick on Sustainability

Friday, April 11, 2014

Editor in Chief Glenn Haussman is with Mark Viola for one interview and flying solo on another this week for two really interesting topics.

So for the April 11, 2014 show we start off with an interview with Hung Luk, COO of the Lam Group, a premier New York City hotel development company. Masters at creating new properties in the country's hottest hotel market their next may prove to be a masterstroke. That project is of course the much anticipated Virgin Hotel New York. Not yet going vertical we get a sneak peek into the future and chat with Hung about this project their overall New York strategy.

Then Glenn chats sustainability with JoAnna Abrams, CEO of Mindclick, whose business focuses on helping hotels become environmentally focused. We're not talking the easy stuff like LED light bulbs or washing sheets less. Nope, Abrams company focuses on every single element that is made for a hotel and helps suppliers make their products more environmentally friendly, which in turn makes hotels happier and healthier for the guest.

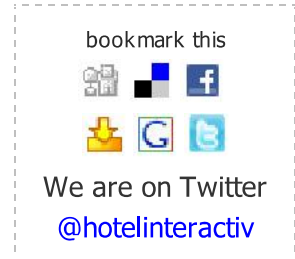

To share a great success story we bring in Dave Lippert, VP Procurement, Architecture & Construction with Marriott to use them as an example of how these companies working together are changing the nature of the hospitality sustainability.
